

Schiavello created integrated planters for seating and workstations that bring the outside leafy character of the city indoors, adding vibrancy and softness, and adding restfulness to the design language of the workplace. The biophilic elements also improve wellbeing.

Crawford explains research has shown having greenery in an office and having outlooks onto green space can improve worker wellbeing by between 50-60 per cent compared to an office without natural elements within

A biophilic influence –

The customised Schiavello Krossi Workstations meet this part of the brief through USB points and power